第一人称复数（我们）：

- 避免：我们认为...

Common Mistakes

In Model United Nations (MUN) speeches, it is generally advisable to avoid using first-person and second-person pronouns (such as “I,” “you,” “we”). Instead, using third-person pronouns (such as “the country,” “these countries”) helps to maintain a formal and objective tone.

First Person Singular (I):

- Avoid: I believe...
- Replace with: [Country Name] believes...

First Person Plural (We):

- Avoid: We believe...
- Replace with: [Country Name] believes...

Second Person Singular and Plural (You/You All):

- Avoid: You should...
- Replace with: Countries should...

Here are some error examples and their corrected versions:

First Person Singular (I):

- Error: I believe the current environmental issues are very serious.
- Correction: [Country Name] believes the current environmental issues are very serious.

First Person Plural (We):

- Error: We should take measures to address climate change as soon as possible.
- Correction: [Country Name] believes countries should take measures to address climate change as soon as possible.

Second Person Singular and Plural (You/You All):

- Error: You need to enhance international cooperation.
- Correction: Countries need to enhance international cooperation.
